The Boiler Room
Plugging a Hole
Since 1993

The Boiler Room has had many mothers and fathers. Thank you.

Thank you Port Townsend for supporting the kids you don't know, the folks it's hard to get comfortable about, and the possibility that one of the misfit geniuses that spends time in our building will save the world.

I love the Boiler Room. It serves the community. It saves lives. It helps bring our kids along. Support your kids and your community for as little as $5.00 per month. Choose the amount to tax yourself. This is a critical expense after all; your choice.

I hope you appreciate that this flyer is decidedly low-gloss. We take pride in doing more for less. Our 501(c)3 non-profit has a budget of barely $100,000. Help keep our costs down, respond asap so we don't have to spend another $5.00 reminding you that you love the Boiler Room too.

Many thanks
And please call with your questions and suggestions.

The Boiler Room is fluffing out its sails and has new momentum as it heads into the summer of 2010. A few new crewmembers, a few new course corrections, a new job center and another call for community support are all part of the downtown Port Townsend coffeehouse's future.

Marty Gay, a co-owner of Windermere Real Estate in Port Townsend and a member

"We want people to know what is behind the facade. The Boiler Room wants to be more open to the general public so it's not just a place for people of a certain age and, of course, at all hours, and for all people, is serving up excellent, inexpensive coffee drink," he said.

Per usual, the 17-year-old Boiler Room has its challenges. There was what Gay acknowledged as an internal "meltdown" of sorts a few months ago based on

Boiler Room discourages tobacco with mugs

Vendola, AmeriCorps volunteer for the Boiler Room in Port Townsend, holds a new Boiler Room mug with its anti-tobacco message. The mugs are the result of an art contest organized by the search of a message to discourage tobacco use. The winning design, titled "Don't Be Next" by Susie Tweedy, was one of more than 30 designs submitted by local youths. Nearly 90 percent of all adult smokers became habitual smokers before the age of 19, according to Karen Obermeyer of Jefferson County Public Health. For information about tobacco prevention efforts, call Jefferson County Public Health, 385-9400. Mugs are available at the Boiler Room, 711 Water St.
